

Mead Clark Lumber Welcomes Brian Hahn

Brian Hahn

Mead Clark Lumber is proud to announce the recent hiring of Brian Hahn in the Door and Window Department. Having grown up in the window business (Hahn's Windows, formerly in Cotati), Brian brings a wealth of knowledge in window purchasing, sales, and service.

When Brian's parents closed Hahn's Windows at the end of 2009, Brian seized the opportunity to work at Mead Clark. "It's very fast-paced, but a great place to work" he says. "Everyone at Mead Clark has been so welcoming, I'm really enjoying it here."

In the short time that he's been at Mead Clark, Brian has already serviced many former Hahn's Windows customers, who have tracked him down for special projects. Though Brian is an expert in Marvin, Anderson and Milgard windows, he is studying up on the many other windows and doors sold at Mead Clark.

The Door and Window Department at Mead Clark is a shining star. Even in this economic downturn, sales in this department increased from 2008 to 2009. The department offers quality products, a staff of six well-trained experts that know their product, and strong buying power. These features, in turn, provide customers with superb service and extremely competitive pricing.

Michael Seeker, Mead Clark's sales manager in the Door and Window Department, says Brian rounds-out the expert knowledge among the team in his department. "We could not have asked for a better person to hire on," he says. "Contractors are looking for someone they can rely on to make their projects go smoother, and Brian is that person when it comes to windows."

Away from work, Brian spends time with his one-year-old son, Tristan, and his wife, Bethany, at their home in Sebastopol. As a hobby, he partakes in Civil War re-enactments around the state - an activity a friend introduced him to in Duncans Mills many years ago.

Brian also enjoys blacksmithing and, he says, "trying new stuff in general." Which is another reason why he fits in so well at Mead Clark.
